Wednesday, March 23. : : : 1894

THE GARYS have been provided for. This is an Evans year and we want them fixed up at once.

T. LIAR GANTT is what the editor of the Register calls Larry of the Piedmont Headlight. "When rogues fall out honest men get their dues."

W. C. P. BRECKENRIDGE, says the News and Courier, ought to be expelled from the Democratic party. If we are given a vote, we shall vote "aye."

MADALINE POLLARD will appear on the stage, 'tis said. With her appearance we may hope that Breckenridge will disappear from the political stage at least.

PHILIP gave an account of his stewardship and defended himself generally in Spartanburg. Very good, but where is he that should say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant?"

WHEN HILL and Irby could not between them find some excuse to fight Mowry's nomination for the postmaster of Charleston, it is pretty good evidence that the charges brought against that gentleman were groundless.

"I AM not in the Reform movement for a few paltry dollars saved by riding on free passes," says McLaurin. Certainly not, you are in it for the matter of five thousand a year which you will have to admit is not a "paltry" amount.

We heard a rumor that there was some unpleasantness between Breckenridge, of Kentucky, and a Miss Pollard in Washington, but as there has been nothing of it in press dispatches we have about concluded that it must be a mistake.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is holding the Bland seigniorage bill, and studying the question thoroughly before he makes up his mind whether or not to veto it. It may be depended upon that Mr. Cleveland is going to follow his own judgment.

STANTON WILSON recounted the past achievements of Refram and its glorious work on Saturday. The black district outrage, the printing steal, the spy business, were no doubt among the blessings of Refram—to say nothing of the increased taxes.

FARLEY has left his rabbit stories, and now champions dispensary liquor—with a few amendments as to quality and price. Go back to Br'er Rabbit, General, there you are inimicable. These latest dispensary tales of yours are too much like the traditional fish stories.

We have received from Congressman Shell the very able speech of the Hon. William L. Wilson on the tariff bill. We wish that it could be placed in the hands of every voter in the United States. It is decidedly one of the best speeches made in Congress in many years.

JOHN GARY EVANS has boasted of the name "black jack," saying he was proud to wear a name given him by Gordon in derision. Yes, and if some one would call him "yeskass" and he imagined he could make political capital out of it, he would wear it proudly. "What's in a name?"

BLAND in the House, Stewart and Pfeiffer in the Senate are men who have been before the public much in the last few years. And not because of their intellectual capacity and power but because of the incessant and tiresome way in which they press their "hobby" in Congress.

MISS POLLARD did not help her case on cross-examination, and while there are some features in the defence as outlined by Mr. Shelby, counsel for defendant, that are not all creditable to the defendant, yet if he shall prove all that he claims, he will make out a pretty strong defence under the circumstances.

CAXEY's "army of peace" is the outcome of fanaticism run mad. This unnatural fanaticism which may be encountered all over the country at present is so silly and absurd that we are compelled to inquire if nineteenth century civilization is not productive of at least the most original imbeciles and fools the world ever saw.

GENERAL EVANS and Colonel Atkinson have begun their campaign in Georgia for the Governorship. The former was a general in the Confederate army and is supported by what is called "the Atlanta ring," and the latter is a young man, who has served in the Legislature. We have read their opening speeches, and outside of personal issues, there seem to be none between the two candidates.

EVERYONE will disapprove of the charge made by the Freeman of Sumter that Judge Benet has consorted nightly with professional gamblers in that town. An opponent's character should not thus recklessly be blackened, and especially so when, as in Judge Benet's case, he is a high officer of the State. Were the truth of the charge for a moment doubted, the Judge's frank and manly denial would convince anyone that it was without the semblance of foundation.

THE Supreme Court of Minnesota has held that a recent statute entitled "an act to provide for the purchase of a site and for the erection of a State elevator or warehouse at Duluth for public storage of grain" is not an exercise of the police power. This is similar to our dispensary cases. The Minnesota Court hold that the act is unconstitutional, but there is a provision in the constitution of that State which says that "the State shall never contract any debts for works of internal improvements or be a party in carrying on such works."

MADALINE POLLARD calls ruining the reputation of W. C. P. Breckenridge getting justice for herself. Most women have a curious idiosyncrasy in the reasoning faculties, but this is one of the most curious examples of it that we have ever heard. What consolation it can be to her, in her miserable disgrace, to let the curtain and expose the depraved character of Breckenridge to public scorn we can't see. Possibly there is something in the story that comes from Cincinnati concerning the conspiracy of a lot of young women to marry money.

It is very interesting to be on the outside and watch the fight among the several aspirants for the Governor's office. It is perhaps the first time in years that fully thirty-two thousand white citizens of this State are so wholly indifferent and unconcerned about who shall be their next Governor. It is a great relief, however, to feel that you are not responsible in the remotest way for what may be done, and being wholly unconcerned and having no special interest in the success of any particular candidate, you can watch the fight without any excitement or prejudice, and all in all it is exceedingly interesting to a spectator.

Now there is Mr. John Gary Evans, Comptroller General Ellerbe, Mr. W. D. Evans, Dr. Sampson Pope, and all of them, each is doing his best to convince the people that he joined the "Reform movement" at the very first, and that possibly the "Reform movement" would not have been a movement, if he had not moved it. And then each tries to beat the others in displacing his love for the people and Reform. Then there is the Governor. He is very much embarrassed by "this little spirit of rivalry" among "our leading Reformers." So much so, it is said, that without any forewarning whatever, he goes off to Washington to consult Senator Irby, and to do what he can to adjust differences and bring about peace and harmony.

Another peculiar thing about recent developments in these strange times is that South Carolina politics are managed to such a great extent from Washington. Some people have gone so far as to say that you must go to Washington if you want to learn exactly how the political situation in this State stands. It is certainly very significant that we have found more accurate prophecies in the newspaper dispatches from Washington than in the State.

Party Wreckers.

The Columbia Register is warning the members of the Reform movement against politicians who are working solely for personal aggrandizement. It says that the sea may appear calm to a casual observer, but that the old experienced mariner sees breakers ahead. We have no doubt that he does, but when he throws his well trained glass on the breakers he does not find them to be the enemy, the old straightjackets, but they prove to be none other than those self-same loud spoken denouncers of the ring rule. What is the matter? It is a fact, and we know it from reliable authority, that seven men met and paraded out the offices before they sent out the cry of reform four years ago. These very men cried ring rule, fraud, suppressed rights and much more. What do you find them doing now? By their own organ they are charged with allowing their personal political interest to endanger their party. They built up the reform movement on prejudice, passion and misrepresentation. Do not the thoughtful men see where they are drifting? It's office, boys, and we think if you will render us honest verdict and be true to yourselves you will agree with us. Furthermore, we think the tax-ridden people have not received that practical relief they hoped for; the taxes are not changed, any if not higher. Look at your receipts; compare them for the last five or six years and see if you are not compelled to say they have been working for office and not for you.

The "New" South Carolina.

On Saturday the political campaign was opened in the usual style of our latest political regime. "You are a liar," was the initial gun, and now for the next, as for the last four years, we may expect this choice epithet to form the bulk of our new politicians' harangues. Editor Gantt, imported to perform the dirty work of keeping alive by abuse and slander the class hatred upon which Refram is built, was the recipient of this sentence from McLaurin. Not one atom more of respect have we for Gantt, than for the other hireling editors whom he has so zealously instructed in his work, but we cannot but feel pity for one who is now turned upon and denounced by the very men whom he helped make what they are. The little fire-eater McLaurin whom Gantt supported for years now turns upon him and denounces him as a "liar" and

"hireling," a man "beneath notice." This then is to be the plan for the year—abuse of one another. Good! We knew it would come. An alliance of scheming politicians working together in the common cause of degrading the masses and overthrowing affairs, is good as long as they have opposition. Now they are unopposed, and turn upon each other. "When rogues fall out," as we have observed before, "honest men get their dues." In the meantime we have "new" South Carolina before us. South Carolina whose men in power give and receive the lie as a matter of course. South Carolina embodying in its huge barbaric the advanced notions of "States rights" (and States dignity.) South Carolina held up to the world as the hot-bed of paternalism, cranks, fanaticism. South Carolina—degraded.

RIDGEWAY NEWS.

RIDGEWAY, S. C., March 22.—For two reasons some time has elapsed since we have sent a communication. First, we noticed two from this point, and second, scarcity of news, and very little to be had now; but such as we have we send.

The farmers in this section are taking advantage of the very fine spell of weather we are having. Rations only bring them to town now, and their stay here is very short indeed. The short crops and low prices the past year seem to have spurred them up to redoubled energy, and each one is vying with the other in preparing and planting. The quantity of fertilizer will not be so large as last year, and we think the intention generally is to plant a smaller acreage in cotton and a larger acreage in grain. The only salvation for our country is to make more at home and let the surplus be cotton. We would be glad to see the farmers of Fairfield try this plan one year, any way, if so, we venture the assertion they would soon be convinced that cotton is not king.

Our town is noted just now for its dullness. Merchants selling little else than the necessities of life, and everyone trying to do on as little as possible of these articles.

The gardens are beginning to make a show. Like "Indian" we were struck with the appearance of friend Mood's garden. It will take the palm in our town, but others might be, and others are making quite a show, and in a short time will not only attract attention, but afford any quantity of vegetables.

We were glad to see a few days since our old friend "re local" and hope to see him often. A year ago, nothing affords us more pleasure than to have our Boro friends visit our wide-awake town.

A negro tramp, while attempting yesterday to steal a ride from Blythe to Charleston, was last night killed. He attempted to mount the train when under way and was thrown under the wheels, crushing his head. Of course death was instantaneous. A great wonder more of them are not killed. They are getting to be a perfect nuisance to persons living on the railroad. Already this week thirteen white and colored have been known to stop at one house near the railroad, and some of them noted for the height of impudence.

The house of I. C. Thomas, Esq., is about completed and adds much to the appearance of our town. We would be glad to see other residences like it going up in the South. Carolina. The order of the day, now one being put up every day or two, which renders it much more comfortable for pedestrians, and would afford pleasant shades for politicians to meet and discuss the various questions of the day. They are getting to be a perfect nuisance to persons living on the railroad. NED AND NELL.

Oh, Nellie, Don't Say No.

SONG BY MRS. C. LADD.

Dedicated to the young ladies of Winnsboro. Mr. Editor: The song I send can be sung as a vocal duet or by as many as you please. You have so many good singers and performers that I know you can easily find an air for it; and I thought it might afford them a little amusement at some of their musical entertainments.

Very respectfully, C. LADD. We wandered by the river bank, The crescent moon was bright, The very stars seemed laughing, And twinkling with delight. I was looking in a lovely face, In eyes of azure blue, I bent and softly whispered, Dear Nellie, I love you.

CHORUS.

Her hand was lying on my arm Looking like a flake of snow, I bent and softly whispered, Dear Nellie, don't say no! Nell looked up with a smiling face, "Now, Ned, is all that true?" I heard her say, "I love you." You had courted twenty-two, I really thought you had courted Sweet, pretty, Bonnie Bess; Ask this question in a year, And I will answer yes!

CHORUS—Her hand, &c.

All you've heard is false, dear, Not a single word is true; I never loved or courted Another one but you, I've flirted just a little, Nell, All the boys did so; Why should we wait a year, dear? True goes very slow.

CHORUS—Her hand, &c.

"I really will believe you true, Believe your every word, I thought it best to tell you The gossip had heard. A year's long, not very long, Twelve months will quickly go; Ask the question then, dear, I will not answer no!"

CHORUS.

I kissed her pretty upturned brow, Her hand was mine to press, I will ask again, dear Nellie, "Then my answer will be yes."

MITFORD ITEMS.

MITFORD, S. C., March 19.—A traveling man has occasion to see and hear many things. As I don't belong to the hearing side, I'll drop two things quite noticeable round about Mitford, one is bad roads and the other is clever people. In order to reach the latter you first have to take the former. Though bad roads, bad weather or bad crops never change the people, they are clever all the same and clever all the time. I have known them for twenty years. The people here are blessed in the way of good health, good churches, good preachers, and of all the good things they are blessed with a good school, and to make it still better, they have a good teacher. The patrons have an occasion to congratulate themselves by securing the services of Mr. W. S. Hall, Jr., one of Wofford's graduates, and in order to make it still better have secured Miss C. Hall, as an assistant teacher, for all of which the parents and children should be thankful. The farmers are industrious, hard working people, progressing well.

Grain looking well. Corn planting has commenced. Garden work in full blast. Peach trees still blooming. Politics just getting going. Little that I say about politics, though two months ago an old grey-headed Anti said to me that the "Reformers wanted to come to us, but didn't know how to go about it." But a few days ago an old white-headed reformer said that the "Anti's wanted to come over to us, but they didn't know how to go about it." You have the opinion of both parties. All I have to say is that you have the case before you, gentlemen of the jury, now give the lawyers their chance, and then render a verdict accordingly, as this is election year.

RIDGEWAY RIPPLES.

RIDGEWAY, S. C., March 23.—The long session of the young folks was broken last Friday evening by quite an agreeable little sociable given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hogan. After the crowd had gathered, Miss Cooper and McEachern began to run their fingers over the noisless keys of the piano, and gave us some very sweet music, which of course was highly appreciated, and afforded the happy band a fine opportunity for conversing. The crowd remained until they felt as if they should be sweetly enfolded in the arms of Morpheus, dreaming of the galits of the happy occasion. The time passed off, seemingly, quite rapid and all present seemed to have enjoyed themselves hugely.

Everybody seems to think it unusually warm for March, however, the spring breeze feel quite pleasant and agreeable passing through the locks of the cranium these bright and beautiful mornings. Ridgeway Drug Store in "full bloom"; always ready to welcome her friends, and her patrons with accuracy and promptness. It is being whispered that the good ladies of the Ridgeway M. E. Church will give a musical entertainment in the near future. Much success to their undertaking, as it is being gotten up for benevolent purposes. Sorry to hear of Dr. Chas. Rabb's death. Think within the past three or four months Fairfield has lost four of her most prominent and successful physicians. They were faithful and earnest in the practice of their profession, reflecting honor upon themselves and a credit to old Fairfield. Let us ask ourselves the question, whose time next? Ridgeway Drug Store was made the recipient of a lovely bouquet of flowers this morning, which decorates the show-case beautifully, and fills the building with fragrance. We the lovers of flowers and appreciate the works of Flora Vale.

LIBRARIES IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

We desire to call the attention of teachers to the desirability of establishing libraries in our public schools. Of the many necessary adjuncts to a live and progressive school, perhaps none are more valuable or important than a well selected library. It is quite a common thing in the public schools north of Mason and Dixon's line, but the exception here. It is unnecessary to dwell at length upon the advantages to be derived therefrom. Of course the good effects would naturally be more perceptible in reading; but a good influence would be exerted over all studies. Reading, as usually taught in our schools, is a dry and monotonous subject, and anything that helps the teacher and interests the pupil would be a happy innovation. We claim a good library would do. By furnishing a wider range and variety of reading matter, pupils would necessarily become better readers, and acquire a taste for literature generally. All of our leading educators claim, and no doubt it is true, that we need more readers of the same grade; but it is impracticable, as a majority of our people can't afford the extra outlay. But this could be avoided and the same end accomplished if each school had a good library to which the pupils would have access under the guidance and direction of the teacher. Then, again, another advantage would be the change from routine work, which all know is often desirable in the school room. In no other event on is there greater need for variety, nor one where it pays better. It would be the duty of the teacher to make a wise and proper selection of books and other reading matter. It should be your aim to furnish books and other periodicals that would be both interesting and instructive. This would be an easy matter in this book-making age. Among many books that would be appropriate, might be mentioned story books, books of travel, biographies, &c. Now, if what has been said, meets the approval of the progressive teacher, the next step will be to devise some means to get it up. We will make no suggestions as to how this can best be done, knowing that "where there is a will there is a way."

Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other harmful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. KING, Conway, Ark.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular product, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
